It is designed to take the place of all now in force. Commissioner Delano, with his solicitor, his special legal counsel, and several of his principal assistants have given much attention to the matter so far as to bring before the committee all the points of the present law, which in practice have not proved definite, and have thereby special constructions, and the decision of the new law will, so far as possible, remedy all the defects that have thus far given the Department special trouble, and make definite that which has constantly been a matter of dispute between the Commissioners and tar payers. Frying Potatoes.

Professor Blot gives the following direc-tions for frying potatoes: Cut them in whatever shape you wish above a bowl of cold water, so that they will drop into it. Then drain and wipe them dry. This must be done quickly, so as not to allow the potatoes to turn reddish. Have a corse towel ready, then turn the potatoes into a colander, and immediately turn them into the towels, shake them a little, and quickly drop them into hot fat. When done turn them into a colander, sprinkle salt on them, and serve hot. If you wish them light or swelled, leave the pota-toes in the colander only about half a minute, then put them back in the very hot fat, stir for about a minute, and put them again in the colander. If the fat is very hot, when drop-ped into it for the second time they will cer-tainly swell. Bear in mind that fried potatoes must be eaten as hot as possible. Fry only one size at a time, as it takes three times as long to fry them when cut in pirces as when sliced.

Miss Phoebe Cousens, the St. Louis brunette, in a speech at the Woman's Rights meeting on Tuesday, mentioned her recent discovery of what the mission of the inferior being, man, of what the mission of the inferior being, man, is. It is to clean the household crockery, and this she based on the authority of the Bible, in the 21st chapter 2d Kings and 13th verse, viz.: "I will wipe Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish; wiping it, and turning it upside down." Miss Cousens thinks there is quite as much reason in this as in the texts by which woman's sphere is established. We are glad these ladies "search the scriptures."

If, says the Nation, Mr. Boutwell can make his peace with the banks, he will soon have an opportunity of letting us see what the "prominent Frankfort banker" has to say. We may be allowed to repeat apropos of this bill, that, no matter what the merits or demerits of the banks may be, it is a bad beginning for a new loan to force them to take a third of it at a low rate of interest, or to go out of existence, "Credit was never yet improved by compulsion."

LOPEZ.

Particulars of the Final Battle-The [Correspondence New York Herald.]

An ambush placed in the bush road between Lope is camp and the captured outpost secur-ed an officer who gave valuable information. ed an officer who gave valuable information. One or two men of a party escaped the ambush and hurried off to Lopez. Camara hastened to attack; his infantry deployed upon the bank of the Aquicaban and opened on the artillery on the other side; the savalry and infantry charged across the river, captured the cannon, routed a force arriving too late to reinforce the defense, said, with the lancers in front, debouched upon the open granud where Loper's bouched upon the open ground where Lopez's tents were pitched, and a force of about four hun ired men drawn up in column, himself at the head. According to instructions the lancers divided and swept round past the column to occupy the mouth of the bush road and close the trap, and while the Brazilian carbineers (Spencer carbines) formed as they emerged from the road from the ford to the camp the commander of the attacking troops, with his staff and a few ca alry, charged to engage the column and prevent Lopez escaping. It was a bold and a dangerous act; but the car-bineers cause on in line, enveloped the column, the column and prevent Lopez escaping. It was a bold and a dangerous act; but the carbineers came on in line, enveloped the column, pouring their terrible fire into it, and especially on the part where Lopez was. The starved and poorly armed Paraguayans could do nothing against such a fire. The slaughter was frightful, and in a few The slaughter was frightful, and in a few minutes it was a sauve qui peut. Lopez, with his staff and a few of his body guard, made for the bush, followed by the party of Brazil-ian officers and cavalry who had devoted themselves to his pursuit. In his flight he was wounded by a corporal of cavalry, and his protectors was cut down almost to a man. When he reached the stream beyond which was the thicket he threw himself from his horse, and waided it, but was so exhausted that he fell half fainting on the opposite bank. There the Brazilian general summoned him to surrender, and, on his striking with his sword, ordered him to be disarmed, which was searcely done when Lopez died. Near by a shellow grave was dug for him; but on Mrs. Lynch being brought back with the body of their son, Colonel Francisco Lopez, who was slain while commanding an escort protecting Mrs. Lynch's flight, and whom she and her daughters and son had taken up and washed, they dug a deep grave, with the aid of the lids of cigar boxes, and deposited Lopez's body at the bottom and above him that of the sen. Thus, at least, the obsequies of the father and the son were done by loving hands. The flight, if flight it could be called where the victors' loss was only seven wounded men from the first to the last of the conflicts of the day, was completely decisive, as, beside a large number killed, 240 prisoners and sixteen cannon were taken. Very few of the force of Lopez could have escaped, for the matted bush in one direction and the precipitous hills in the other which bounded the plain akmost fenced it, and the carbine and lance did the work of destruction well. Escape by the rear bush road was impossible for the force sent round from Bella Vista by way of Dourados to occupy its end had by ex-traordinary marches entered it the same day and an outpost with two cannon was routed and the cannon taken.

If the engagement with the starved and miserably armed force of Lopez was not of a nature to confer much honor on the well fed and splendidly armed Beazilian troops opposed to it, it must be admitted that the latter troops displayed great energy, endurance and inter-pidity in their marches and attacks, and that General Camara has well earned a high repu-tation by the ability of his plans and the splen did manner in which he carried them into effect so as to have scarcely a loophole for the possibility of failure.

Evening Newspapers.

Evening Newspapers.

The value of evening newspapers over those of earlier publication has been demonstrated in London. The Pall Mall Gazette, an influential journal of London, some months ago, commenced its issue as a morning, instead of as before, an afternoon newspaper. It has now resumed its original status, and the announcement is thus made:

"The publication of the Pall Mall Gazette as a morning journal will be discontinued from to-day. The preference of the public for the evening edition has been so distinctly manifested by the circulation of the paper, the desire that the edition should resume its original form is so general and so constantly expressed, that the proprietors of the paper hesitate no longer. The morning edition will be printed in its present shape for a few days, while some necessary alterations of machinery are being made, and then it will re-appear in its original form."

What Kentucky Whisky Makes Men [From the Louisville Courier-Journal.]

[From the Louisville Courier-Journal.]

On Wednesday afternoon a young man named G. W. Hall arrived in the city from Taylorsville in the stage, and, upon alighting on Market street, between First and Second, he stopped a stranger and told a miraculous story about three men and a woman in the stage who had contrived a plan to murder him; that the woman was going to make him believe that she would marry him, and when they would attempt to stand before the minister the men were to advance from behind and pierce him with knives. "Yea, verily," he said, "even unto death will they stab me! Won't you protect me?" The stranger rather disliked the situation in which he was about to be placed, and, not wishing to become ahero, rapidly moved off. Hall then entered a barber-shop and asked to be shaved. While the barber was shaving him he thought he meand the men who seems the street of the stree the barber was shaving him he thought he heard the men who came in the stage talking in the back room, and, without notifying the barber, leaped out of the chair, ran through pletely addled, and femarked that he made a narrow escape from sending the razor into his neck when he made the leap. After leaving the barber shop, Hall wandered about the city repeating the story of the three men and the woman to everybody who would listen to him, until finally he entered a book store on Fourth street, near Market, where he entered into conversation with the proprietor by asking shelter from the men, as he had seen them get out of a car flourishing their large knives over their heads. The book man, thinking the stery true, went to the door to see the men, bat of course none were there, and it the stary true, went to the door to see the men, but of course none were there, and it was then discovered that the man was crasy from the effects of liquer. While in the store, Hall suddenly saw hundreds of little girls "marching down the chimney and leaping through the grate bars," all dressed in white, with wreaths around their heads, and in a short while down came three men with horns on their heads and knives in their heads. horns on their heads and knives in their hands; these he recognized as the men who wanted to murder him. He asked to be escorted to a hotel, when a young gentleman volunteered to take him to the National. Yesterday morning a servant went to the room and found Hall sitting on the bed tearing the sheets into shreds. When asked why he had torn the sheets he replied that his sweetheart had sent him a letter in which she asked him to get her some ribbon, and, as he had no money, he thought he would make it for her. He was then taken before the City Court, where he was pronounced to be labor-ing under mania-a-potu, and upon the request of Dr. Griffiths, was sent to the United States

Hall said in the court room that his mouth was full of fine hair that the barber had stuffed into it, and that was the reason he could not tell the Judge anything about himself. When searched, about $70 was found on his

He says "one's first impression on entering the college is that of stepping into a grand hotel; but what hotel was ever wreathed, perfumed and beautified with such a bewildering wealth of flowers? In little rooms, large rooms, and long ones, trailed, climbed, and clustered all the blossoms of Spring, from stately callas to wildwood anemones, and the sweet-scented trailing arbutus, And then the young ladies—oh, who is sufficient for this? Take the prettiest girl you know, frizz, curl, and flounce her, clothe her in an intensified rainbow, and multiply her by five hundred: then you will multiply her by five hundred: then you will have a faint conception of how pretty were the Vassar girls on "Founder's Day." They beamed, and smiled, and fluttered, finally rowing loveliness, suggesting to the spectator wild ideas of meteors, showers of flowers, colored fireworks—and causing one or two old bachelors to lean against the wall and

Dangerous Sentimentalism.

Did Henry Ward Beecher ever meet a mother whose heart seemed to have the "rickets," and to be grown all to a great, puffy love; who loved her boys when good, and a little better when bad, and by and by pined away to the grave at their beastly selfishness and their reckless lives? If he has not, has he ever read in his Bible of a certain weakhearted priest, who never could bear to reprove his boys, until at last their outrageous wickedness brought down divine judgments wickedness brought down divine judgments on them, and him, and the ark of God? Love is one of the mightiest things in the universe; but Mr. Beecher illustrates its weakness. In its legitimate form it is a principle; its counterfeit is a purely selfish sentimentali

THE EVENING NEWS.

MONDAY, MAY 16, 1870.

There is an item in a New York dispatch this morning which we can not understand. It is to the effect that Hon. Andrew Jackson Rogers, of New Jersey, when speaking at a political meeting on Saturday night was suppressed with a shower of eggs and stones. Where this meeting took place is not stated, but it never could have been in New York or New Jersey, for they wouldn't treat the Honorable Jack in any such manner there. Next thing some vile calumniator will be telegraphing that Dirty Shirt Dean has been cowhided in Kentucky for his political senti-

It appears, however, from ascertain. That they knew they were to recently published statistics, that murders by blame is still further shown by the fact that rail in Great Britain are by no means as rare they deserted the wreck immediately because, as many suppose. During the six years ending with 1867, 1,268 persons were killed on the danger from the passengers." Their ection railroads of the United Kingdom. In 1868, 62 was in marked contrast to that of the conducpassengers were killed and 525 injured, and tor of the express train, who, although bruised in 1869, 39 killed and 1,060 injured; in 1838, and bleeding, remained on the scene of the 14 persons killed and 3 injured while crossing disaster, doing all he could to alleviate the at level crossings; and in 1869, 23 killed and 3 sufferings of the wounded. The reconer's injured; 1868, 49 trespassers killed (eight of jury have wisely ordered the arrest of the conthem suicides) and 4 injured; and in 1808, 97 duotor, and the engineer will deubtless receive killed (12 of them suicides) and 20 injured; in the same treatment. If the evidence against 1868, 83 servants of companies or contractors them is as conclusive as the telegraphic rekilled and 65 injured, and in 1869, 151 killed port indicates, they should not be permitted and 148 injured; from miscellaneous ocuses, 4 to escape. From these figures it appears that the number of killed and injured materially increased last year.

The Northern Pactic Swiadle.

Several papers in the country, notably the St. Louis Democrat and the Journal of this city, have been very much comforted by the vote of the House referring the Northern Pacific Railroad swindle to the Committee on Railroads. The Democrat even goes so far as to say that "the vete gives strong reason to hope that the railroad ring is effectually smashed in the House;" and the Journal has been equally confident. We wish we could believe they are right, but to us the reference to the committee with instructions to report back at any time, is sufficient evidence that the vote was merely a postponement for a few days, which will effect nothing. The committee being authorized to report the bill back at any time will take occasion to do so very soon, at least as soon as the first favorable opportunity occurs, and then it will be put through with a rush. The railroad ring and unless the people take stringent measures and speak their minds very plainly it will triumph overwhemingly. The vote upon the grant to the Oregon road a couple of weeks ago and upon which we commented at the time, was regarded as a test vote in Congress. The lobbyists had united upon certain roads, and that was the first one put forward. It had no particular claims or advantages, but the ring was for it and the land was voted. So it will probably be with the other bills when they come up. The Northern Pacific, as the most extensive and powerful, will have the first turn. and, judging from the temper exhibited in the House in trying to choke off all discussion and amendment, will get all it asks for. At its heels come a hundred other sharks of lesser dimensions but equally rapacious, all clamor ing for food, and the majority of them will be apt to receive it. The only hope left now is in the President. In his message he placed himself so firmly in opposition to the granting of land subsidies, that he certainly can not sign a bill which is so manifestly a robbery of the people.

Let us see what the projectors of this scheme want. The road is to run from DuLuth, at the head of Lake Superior, to Puget's Sound, on the Pacific. It was first projected a dozen or fifteen years ago, and a grant was voted by Congress, which expired by limitation. When the men who had obtained possession of the charter saw what other roads were doing, they revived their concern and entered the field. They ask for the alternate sections upon each side of the road along a strip varying in width from sixty to one hundred and twenty-five miles, and have run their line in a zig-zag meandering course in order to take in the best lands they can find, and to lengthen the line. The number of acres is not definitely known. It is not less though than fifty millions, and more probably is nearer seventy-five. The road, it is admitted, can be built at far less expense even than the Union Pacific; there are hundreds of miles where scarcely any grading will be required, and in the whole distance there will be few heavy grades, and no tunneling. If the land asked for was sold at the government price, it is thought it would more than pay all cost of construction and equipping. The managers have been asked if this is not true, but they have invariable refused to answer, or have evaded the question. Their proposition, stripped of all verbiage, is to build a road to the Pacific through what they claim is the firest portion of the continent and one which in a few years, comparatively, will be inhabited by a great population, which will make the investment an exceedingly profitable one to do this on condition that the government pays the cost, and perhaps a bonus besides. Almost anybody would like to have such a pro-

The Blame for the Recent Accident. Some of the Eastern papers head all accounts of railroad disasters "Murder on the Rail," going upon the theory that some one is always to blame, and that there can be 10 such thing as an accident in the strict seuse of the word. While not prepared to carry that theory to such an extent, there can be no doubt that in many cases-perhaps the majority-it is true. Carelessness on the part, of officials or employes is generally the cause of accidents, and if they were held to a stricter accountability it is probable the number of accidents would rapidly diminish. The herrible affair which occurred upon the Missouri Pathe road last week, and by which more than twenty persons were kalled and many more injured, is directly traceable to the carelessness-to call it by such a mild name-of the conductor and engineer of the freight train. If their statements are to be believed their watches were at least fifteen minutes behind time, a thing indicating gross negligence, for ugon a road of such magnitude, where correct time is a matter of such importance and The English are very fond of talking about where clocks are placed in every station as the confinctor testified, they "apprehended

The Blackguard Editor.

There are loud wails from all parts of the world in which the press is free, over the growth of sensational, caresdropping, scandalmongering, malignant, black-mailing ournalism. The rapidity with which intelligence is now transmitted has so stimulated curiosity that the purveying of news—of all kinds, good, bad and indifferent—has become one of the most remunerative of trades; and those who have successfully engaged in it having discovered that there is no news on the whole so panolitable, that is, so eagerly sought after, as personal gossip, have pushed their operations into the domain of private life to a degree mever before known, and, in doing so, have become possessed of a means of intimadation which is to some natures, and those among the best, very terrible. The result is that the blackguard editor—this s a strong terr a, but it is the correct one-oc cupies the position in our day toward the rest the community which the dueling bully

He takes the wall of decent people and forces them to step in to the mud; criticize their personal appearance, stare their wives and daughters out of courtenance: looks into their window when they are at dinner, and aughs over the fare, and, when they complain, impudentand steel went through his carcass without difficulty, and he could not tell the moment sword or pistol as well as he did, and would sacrifice him to the infernal gods. Consequently, he had to exercise some caution. His uccessor of course labors under no such restraint. He is under no obligation to expose himself-to any risk. He sits snugly in his editorial chair, and blazes away at his victim as long as it affords him any amusement, and, what is better still, gets paid handsomely by an admiring public for every shot he gives. In other words, the more of a bully and blackguard he is, the richer he grows. His wictims can not retort, because they have no weapons. To fight him on equal terms they would need to control a newspaper, and newspapers are such expensive weapons that nobody but protessional editors can use them for personal warfare - The Nation.

The Georgia Albinos.

The Dawson (Ga.) Journal of April 28, contains the following account of one of the strangest freaks of nature that has ever occurred in this country:

We have in Dawson four Albinos, aged respectively, from about four to ten years. The parents of these children are very black, esparents of these children are very black, especially the father—the mother being a little the brightest of the two. If we have been correctly informed, the mother has given birth to seven children; the three first born are as black as their parents, while the last four are unnaturally white, with long flaxen hair as soft as down. They do not converse very fluently—seem to be somewhat absentminded, and are ordinarily intelligent. They see better at night than in day time. We learn that when the first white child was learn that when the first white child was orn, the father was rather inclined to disown it, but satisfactory reasons having been given by physicians, he became reconciled, and is now very proud of all his children, notwith-standing the contrast in their color, and has been offered large sums of money for the white ones, for public exhibition.

posal accepted. If the road is so much needed, if it is to be so profitable, let private capital to build it and reap the reward. If the country to be opened up is so rich and fertile and is to produce so much, it will hardly pay the government to give it away to speculators; it would be cheaper to build the road outright and give it away, and hold on to the land until it rebels."

A Chaker Lady's Advice.

"I beseech of thee not to go to this war,' said a Quaker lady to her son, an accomplished physician of Beaver county, Pennsylvania. "But I do not go to fight, mother; I am going as a medical man; surely there is no harm in that." "Well, well," replied the old lady, with a beaming look of love and loyalty, in her eye, "go, then, if it must be so; and if thee finds that thee kills more than thee cures, I advise thee to go straightway over to the rebels."

The New York hod-carrier enjoys a similar advantage over his brother tradesman of the Queen City; yet we have never heard it urged on that account that he could carry more bricks or climb a higher ladder. The free lovers and free lunchers of the New York press may not believe it, but we assure them it is a fact that there are better newspapers printed in Cinati than in New York. That is to say, that the Gazette, Commercial and Enquirer, of Cincinnati contain more news, and of a that the Gazette, Commercial and Enquirer, of Cincinnati contain more news, and of a better quality, are of better "make-up," and in every way better records of current history, than the New York Herald, Tribune and Times. Wake another branch of journalism—Washington correspondence. Every winter men have been sent from New York in scores to write letters from the capital, yet not one of them has been able to make a reputation for himself or the newspaper be represented.

They have succeeded only in getting up a yrups, 60c@$1, according to quality.

OILS-Linseed is firm and active, closing trash which no Circinnati paper would print; while the Wash ington correspondence of the Cincinnati rress has been copied by the newspapers of the entire country. Mr. Reid's fame as 'Agate," of the Gazette, writing from vashington, was well deserved and national. Whom do the New York brethren pit against him in this capacity?

Now, we are very well aware that the freelovers and free-lunghers will affect a smiling ive chief ens fair. We quote them at 10c per lb, or incredulity for all this; and to the end of satisfying them entirely we shall put our firm belief in their inferiority into this very tangible and acceptable shape: For a wager of $1,000—or more if agreed upon—the Enquirer will furnish a man, now connected with it editorially, who will do more of the general work of journalism, and do it better, than any man connected with any New York paper. The test to include every grade of service from the printing-office to the sanctum; to begin with the type-setter and end with the chief editor, and to skip none of the intermediate stages of local reporting, shorthand reporting, etc.

Or, if that won't do, the Enquirer will furnish two men, who, for a wager of $2,000, will nish two men, who, for a wager of $2,000, will do more of the general work of journalism, and do it better than any two men in any New York office. To render it entirely favor-able to New York, we will agree to make the contest in a New York office, where the En-quirer men are entirely unacquainted, and subject it to the decision of a committee of New York editors. The details can easily be arranged when we find somebody who means business. For the present, we call the attention of the free-lovers and free-lunchers to the main featurers of the proposition. There's money in it.

The Gazette of this morning referring to the above propositions, says:

These are excellent propositions, and we ope the trial will be made; but they are not stated with sufficient exactness for a trial upon a valuable wager. We propose to take a share with the Enquirer in this demonstration of the superiority of Cincinnati journalists.

To that end we offer to wager any agreed amount that the Enquirer can furnish a man who, with one hand tied behind him, shall write a better editorial, in less time, on protection, or capital punishment, or leaving the city for a farm, than Horace Greeley can with both hands free. Thus we propose him and beat him on his own special sub-

"So it does," said Mr. Brougham, "let us have it made up." Turning into the nearest drug store, the paper was given to the clerk, who gave it a careless glance and then proceeded to get a phial ready and pull out divers boxes. With another look at the order, down came a tinc-ture bottle and the phial was half filled. Then there was a pause. The gentlemanly attend-ant was evidently puzzled. At last he broke down completely, and rang for his principal, an elderly and severe looking individual, who an elderly and severe looking individual, who presently emerged from the inner sanctum.

A good fit from good goods, at a reasonable price can always be obtained at 19 West Washington street.

As will be seen by an advertisement in another column, W. I. Haskit, Esq., offers for sale his residence at 647 North Meridian street. This is one of the most desirable pieces of property, and is, we believe, the only one for sale in that vicinity. The house is a commodious brick one with ten rooms, and the yard, which contains an agre, is well set in shrub-bery, with fruit trees of all kinds, grapes, currants, gooseberries, etc. Now is the chance to secure a bargain.

The following incident was related by a member of the Baltimore bar, who, at the time of its occurrence, was but recently admitted to practice. The truth of the state-ment may be depended on, and even the con-versation introduced I give, I think, nearly word for word as reported to me.

At the period referred to there were several single-storied houses on the east side of St. Paul street, between Lexington and Saratogs streets, each of which contained but two rooms. They were rather massively—according to present ideas—constructed of brick, but have been for a long time displaced by tall and stately buildings. One of these single storied houses was occupied by my informant. The front apartment was used as a law office.

the rear as a sleeping room. One calm and clear moonlight winter night when the snow lay deep upon the city streets and roofs, Mr. — was making preparations to retire to bed, when his front door bell was rung. He roused his negro servan boy, who was nodding on his stool by the chimney cor-ner, and sent him to open the door to the late visitor. The boy almost immediately returned alone. He said that nobody was at the door, bût that a gentleman was standing in the snow in the middle of the street, talking to himself and tossing his arms about.

. — now went to the front door him-When he opened it he found one, who was evidently a gentleman—he could see that by the moonlight—standing on the pavement facing him.
"Was it you who rang my bell?" he asked.

"Yes, sir," was the reply, "I owe you an apology for disturbing you at an hour so unseasonable. But the fact is, some thoughts have come into my head which I wish to commit to paper, and seeing a light in your back window (the house stood upon the corner of an alley), and considering it a matter of course that a lawyer's office is supplied with stationery I took the liberty of ringing your bell."

"You are very welcome, indeed," said the asked.

"You are very welcome, indeed," said the young lawyer. "Walk in, sir."
The stranger followed him into the inner apartment, where a bright fire was burning in the grate. The manner of his guest was so impressive of intellect that Mr. — offered him his bed; but the visitor only asked the use of a chair, table and writing materials. So the negro boy lay down upon his pallet on the floor, and the young lawyer retired to his bed, leaving the stranger bending over the table writing.

When Mr. — awakened in the morning his strange visitor was sitting in a chair, with his head upon the table, asleep. The motion made by the young lawyer on awakening aroused the stranger. The latter seemed at once to be wide awake. He arose from his seat, thanked his host for his hospitality, and Secombe Manufacturing Company, and desig-gracefully apologized for his intrusion on the nated and prescribed by Commissioner Delano previous night. He was then about to leave pieces of paper on the table.

"I have a copy of what I have composed," said the stranger, "and leave the original with you as some acknowledgement of your kindness under circumstances so trying."

The stranger left. The lawyer did not know until a long time afterward, when the "Song of the Bells"—of which he still has the original than the still have the still have the still had the still have the s nal—had been published and became famo that his singular visitor was Edgar A. Poe.

The Union Pacific Transfer Company is hereafter to receive all freight and passengers from the Union Pacific, which is to run its baggage cars to the Iowa side of the Missis-sippi on the transfer boats, and the Iowa sippi on the transfer boats, and the lowaroads are to receive the same at a common temporary depot at Council Bluffs, which is to be used for that purpose until the bridge is completed and permanent buildings erected on the Union Pacific grounds.

Miss Kellogg visited the Utica State Luna tic Asylum, a few days ago, and asked leave to sing to the more violent patients, accompa-nying herself on a guitar. The unfortunate inmates were deeply affected, examined her from head to foot, asked to see the pretty little boot with which she beat time, turned her round and round, and finally the women insisted upon kissing her, to all of which the young singer amiably consented.

The yacht Sappho, which has just won her first laurels in a splendid victory over the English yacht Gambria, off the Isle of Wight, is one of the largest yachts, if not the largest, yet built in America. She is about two hundred and seventy tuns burden, schooner rigged, and originally carried a larger spread of canvas than any other yacht affoat. About two years ago, however, her builders and (then) owners, C. and R. Poillon, ship-builders, of New York, lowered her masts about twenty-five feet, considerably reducing her spread of canvas. She still carries, however, an unusual amount of sail, and is staunch and best adapted to a heavy gale on rough sailing. Two years ago the writer was on board of her when she took part in a regatta, the vessels starting from the club house of the New York Yacht Club, on Staten Island, and sailing around the light ship off Sandy Hook and back, a total distance of about twenty miles. During only ten minutes of the time allotted to the race was there any wind adapted to the sailing qualities of such a vessel, the remainder of the time being a dead calm. During those ten minutes the swiftest steamer could not have kept up with her, and her movement was beautiful beyond anything the spectators had ever seen in a sailing vessel. Notwithstanding the great size of the vessel for pleasure-sailing, her finish, in every detail, is as neat and perfect as that of any of the smaller craft. Her sailing qualities under a stiff breeze are probably unequaled by those of any vessel afloat. der a stiff breeze are probably unequaled by those of any vessel afloat.
